Whether prime time or drive time; live or prerecorded; local, syndicated, or network – how does that programming get from where it originates to our homes, cars, and mobile devices? To best represent your local broadcaster (and avoid hearing “You’re Fired!”), a lawyer should understand how station operations work. Join our expert panelists as they parse the regulations governing local broadcasting, whether media ownership, station recordkeeping and other operational obligations, sponsorship ID, children’s programming, political broadcasting and more. From net neutrality to broadcast deregulation, get an insider’s view of how the independent FCC is operating under the Trump Administration, and what tops the agenda. With the media under attack and sometimes told to stifle, how are journalists faring? And with any number of media mergers pending, how are the FCC, the FTC, and the DOJ looking at competition? PANEL: Coming Attractions: The Repack and ATSC 3.0
It’s going to be legen—wait for it—dary! With the voluntary spectrum auction of television spectrum behind us, broadcasters are readying for the repack and the advent of the NextGen television standard. What do broadcasters need to know about the repack, channel shares, and potential reimbursement dollars for LPTV and FM radio? Will ATSC 3.0 truly be dyn-o-mite, how do broadcasters plan to use it, and what are we learning about the transition of over-the-air television broadcasting to the next-generation standard from the model market test beds? Our panel will focus on how lawyers can help their clients make it work.
